This camp is the culmination of a twenty-year plus project, originating with a winterized two-story garage living space. The house is designed to maintain the feel of the old structure while incorporating LEED efficient with modern system to make the new 2,200 square foot camp appear rustic, yet act modern. Research was conducted to maintain the "Great Camp of the Adirondacks" aesthetic. The house complies with the strict requirements of the lake community, and the design was reviewed and approved by the local Architectural Control committee.
